“ Polly was my friend way before we ever married brothers. She was always the sweetest friend and sister in law a person could have. We had some good times together years ago, and back in time. Back in time before things got so complicated. I will always remember her as my sister in law, and the best one a young girl could have. She was a great cook. we would go out there on Sundays, just knowing she would have a big pot of collard greens and cornbread, or something else delicious to dine on. Her son, Steve, and my daughter, Doris practically grew up together while Polly's mother baby sat them for us to work. I know she will be sadly missed by her sisters and brother, and her grandchildren. But my friend Polly is up in Heaven and not struggling to breathe anymore.
