“ When my father was hospitalized during my senior year in high school and mom was staying with him Viola and Houston came to stay at our house with me. They provided stability, support, and love for all of us.
My mom and Viola spent many afternoons together planning meals and making grocery lists, clipping coupons and watching “the stories“.
I often drove them to the shopping centers. They didn't drive until I insisted that they learn. Once Viola learned to drive, she told me that she thought about me each time she got into her car.
Viola was always kind and giving, very sensitive, sweet beyond compare.
