Jennifer you pretty much helped raise me. You're more my sister than my cousin. As kids we were unseperable but as we started to grow up we broke apart and went separate ways doing our own thing. What nobody knows is we had found each other again. We started to get close and regrow that bond with each other again. I miss you so much already 😭 I cant believe it cause it's still not real. In all honesty I never would've thought that your passing would hit or affect me this way. Nobody's has except my moms. It hurts me to the core. When I found out I literally balled like a baby on and off all day. no matter what anyone says or believes I know your story and it's not what people thinks. You tried to get outta that lifestyle you wanted out. It was just too hard especially when you felt alone. But through it all you lived you played you laughed and most of all you loved hard with everything you had and that's all that matters. Fly high sis I love you and will always miss you deeply
