“ I was just going through pictures from almost 15 years ago the other day and ran across your beautiful face. You were a beautiful soul with a beautiful spirit. You never let a battle or anyone define you. It breaks my heart reading another angel has gained their wings. I know the love you had for Emma and one day I hope she sees this post and hears from an old friend of yours just how much she meant to you and the love you had for her was bigger than all the stars the sky could fill. I love you always and if I could have been there for your family during this time if known, I would have just to give them a hug. Dance in the clouds for me babygurl until we meet again! My condolences to all of Kristen's family.
