“ Mom and I have been remembering how much Clyde loved Sean and Evan, both. Mom was so happy when she received to Sean's Community College graduation announcement and his note. He told her about how his life had really turned around and he was going on to UNC in the fall. He said he knew "papa" would have been so proud! We were so proud of him,too. We can't express how sad we are at this time. We can't begin to know your grief. We will continue to pray for you, Sheree and Evan.

“ I am saddened by the loss of Sean. I had the privilege of teaching Sean for one semester. Sean had a kind and gentle spirit and was always a friend to other people. I was very proud of his accomplishments, both as a student and as an individual. There simply aren't enough words to describe how sad his loss is. I will be thinking about and praying for your family as you try to move forward.

Sincerely,
Jennifer Fisher

“ My dearest Sean, I am sitting in the same chair and sitting at the same spot where I saw you sit for many hours at a time in the kitchen studying your hardest to meet a term paper deadline or just studying for a test. You amazed me that you could do all this while listening to music at the same time. You are one of the most intelligent individuals I have ever met and I told myself that you were going to make something of your life. The day you got accepted into Chapel Hill you hugged when I congratulated you and you told me I had a hand in it by giving you a home for the past two years and letting you and Boogie live here without asking anything from you. Oh baby boy, why? Why couldn't things have changed for the better? Last week when I saw you, you looked so good and I told you I was proud of you and loved you. You told me while you hugged me that you loved me also and you hugged me so tight. If only I had known that was the last hug I would have gotten from you I never would have let you go. My tears have not stopped since I found out. I also told you that I was proud of you getting sober and clean and you said it wasn't easy but you had. During our late night talks I told you that you deserved a better life son and the things you went through over your years would make you a stronger person. We both cried together and laughed together. You told me your secret wish for me that only you and I know and to honor your memory I'm going to be strong and do it. I wish you had called me that night at work but you probably thought I was too busy. I would never be too busy for you. You also called me your second mother and that is such an honor from you. That is why I am hurting so bad. I can't imagine the pain your mother is going through and I do pray for her to find some peace out of this situation but as a mother myself there will never be peace of the loss of a special son like you. I looked up at the stars last night asking God to please hold you in his arms and tell you that this messed up world is no longer your concern and you can rest now. I will see you again my beautiful Sean and please know that your life has impacted so many people by letting us into your life. The morning after when I was walking down at the pond before I found out that you couldn't take anymore, the most beautiful dragonfly flew in front of me that I had to stop and

I watch it land on a bush right beside of me. I said aloud, "That is the most beautiful dragonfly I have ever seen" because its colors were so vivid and bright that it stood above the rest like you stood above the rest. Last year around this time you walked down the pond many times to collect dragon flies for you class. Was that your's or Gods way of telling me you are at peace now? I like to think so. Looking out this window now where you looked out many many times studying is breaking my heart knowing this chair and this space is an empty spot without you. I love you so much and will always think of you. Lora

“ I have soo many great memories with Sean. The first time I met him was working in a restaurant, we instantly clicked. We loved The Weeknd and Kendrick Lamar, and many others and couldn't stop talking. Every time I worked with him, not matter the stress that comes with working, he would put a smile on my face!! Even if we just shared a lil glance. He was my Seandizzle, I was his Sandizzle!! <3 The moments I can't keep out of my mind most is running up or down them steps at work and him saying ok, let's get this!!! Soo pumped, and totally looking forward to hanging out after work!! He was soo wise and we had some great conversations!! One thing I will forever remember about Sean is that, no matter how sad and broken he felt inside, he was always trying to build me up and fill me with pride!! I will always treasure every moment him and I shared and I am soo sorry for this awful loss, he was an all around awesome person!!! RIP Seandizzle....I LOVE YOU FRIEND!!!! <3

*To Sean's mother, father and friends,
Sean was a student in my History course several years ago. We reconnected after he asked that I write a letter of reference for him for Chapel Hill. I really got to know him then- his dreams, his hardships and most of all, his perseverance. Sean had the kind of natural intellectual ability that many covet and few possess. Yet he was such a kind and gentle soul. We were all so proud of him and his accomplishments, particularly in the face of so many obstacles. His was a light that faded far too early. He made a memorable difference in the lives of so many he encountered including my own. I weep for him, and for all of you who loved him. May God give you all strength as you struggle to make peace.*

Sean was a nice young man. He had his struggles like we all do, but he picked his self up and kept on, keeping on best he knew how. He just felt he could not struggle anymore. He and my daughter Rachel went to high school together and also dated. The fondest memory I have of him was that long hair he had before he decided to cut it. His family will never get over this, they will get through it best they know how. Let us all cherish the memories we have of him and celebrate the life he did live while on this earth. He truly touched many souls with his spirit. Praying for God's peace and love to surround his family. Teresa Whitt
