Tribute Wall

“Mama was fiercely loving, deeply faithful, and wonderfully unfiltered. She loved Jesus, her family, and a good bowl of ice cream. She never sugar-coated a thing, and she never had much patience for nonsense. Her honesty was a gift, and her strength shaped all of us. She was endlessly curious and always learning new things. Reading the bible was her number one past time, and she loved to stop us during a conversation to read us a devotional that struck a chord with her. She took notes, did research and loved to share what she learned.

Her consistency was unmatched—She kept in touch with everyone; high school friends, relatives, neighbors—calling on a finely tuned schedule she never failed to maintain. She donated, volunteered, and always showed up. When the call came she always answered.

We grew up in a tremendous neighborhood filled with lifelong friends, and she was one of many neighborhood moms that kept us all straight, provided instruction and was a safe harbor for many. It was a world she helped make safe and full of love. Many today still call her mama Shelby.

She never met a stranger and had the gift for gab. She would strike up a conversation with anyone she met and we loved that about her. She was the one who would be there for those in need. When there was a death in a family, she would be there to lend help, stay with the house while the funeral was going on, and do anything she could to help families in times of need. She was a Sunday School teacher at Lively Stones Baptist Church for many years and always loved to be around children, always ready with a pocketbook peppermint.

She was a devoted wife, mother, daughter, aunt, and friend. She was a great example of a Proverbs 31 Woman – a model of wisdom, strength and faithfulness, characterized by her industrious nature, generosity to the poor & fear of the Lord.

A few nights before she passed, Eric had a dream. Daddy was placing a rocker beside his on the porch in the mountains—his heaven. We are sure the two of them are there now, catching up on the nine years they spent apart. We know in our hearts that the dream was more than symbolic.

There will be a huge hole in our hearts and we will miss her until we see her again one day. Heaven sounds sweeter all the time. We love you Mama.
